Voodoo Debuts at Grand National Roadster Show 2012

Wednesday, February 08, 2012

The world's first epoxy carbon fibre/Kevlar '32 roadster made its world debut at the recent Grand National Roadster Show in Los Angeles.

The car, conceived and designed by Australian Steve Walmsley will feature in Australian Hot Rodder Number Two.

Eight years in the design and construction the unique roadster body is mounted to a custom-designed tubular chassis that when mounted appears as traditional as any '32 could be, but with far superior features to that found on a traditional chassis.

To be marketed under the Voodoo Hot Rods brand in the US and eventually Australia interest in the cars on display was intense for the entire duration of the three-day show.

Australian Hot Rodder #02 can now be pre-ordered. >>
