Voodoo Evolution 32R

Thursday, 12 April 2012 00:00

Launched at the Grand National Roadster Show earlier this year, the Voodoo Evolution 32R is the world's first Kevlar / carbon fibre '32 roadster body. The body features a v-sectioned hood top, dropped grille, raised wheel wells and a raked windscreen, and weighs just 200lbs.

The Voodoo Evolution 32R tubular chassis offers substantial impact protection and mimics a traditional Deuce chassis that's been pinched, bobbed, pie-cut, mini-tubbed and z'd. It also offers over five inches of suspension travel, despite it sitting four inches lower than many conventional repro chassis.

Voodoo Hot Rods claim the 32R can be completed for a cost of less than $50,000 (£32,000), but who will be the first in the UK to test that claim? Full details can be found at www.voodoohotrods.com
